PROPERTY AND FINANCE

Without an LPA, bank accounts including joint accounts could be frozen. Even when you are of sound mind, LPAs can be useful. Your attorney(s) could take care of your affairs whilst you are on an extended holiday, in the event of you being hospitalised or losing capacity in any way. Property and finance LPA's ensure your finances are looked after by the people you trust most, in your time of need.

LASTING POWER OF ATTORNEY

An essential but often overlooked document is the Lasting Power of Attorney. In the event of you becoming seriously ill, falling into a coma or if you can otherwise not reliably make your own decisions, an LPA will ensure your affairs are kept in order.

This simple document entitles an attorney of your choosing to handle your affairs for you when you're incapable of doing so. Your attorney can be anybody you like, including close friends and family members

- Property and Finance - Make sure your finances are kept in order
- Health and Welfare - Keep control of important health decisions

Take control of your affairs easing the financial and emotional strain on your family

Make sure all your bills continue to be paid on time and your debt is not a potential burden to loved ones

Guarantee that your property is maintained to the standard you've worked hard to achieve

£200 Each or £350 for Any Two LPA's

HEALTH AND WELFARE

This LPA permits your attorney(s) to act for you in respect of your personal affairs and welfare. It allows people you choose to make decisions about giving or refusing consent to particular types of health care, including medical treatment decisions. They can also decide whether or not you should stay in your own home, perhaps with help and support from social services. If it is best for you, they can also help you move into a residential home nearby. The LPA allows them to help choose the right care for you.
